Well Sense's Executive Director recently named a Top Woman Leader
by *Business NH Magazine

Manchester – Lisabritt Solsky was among five women profiled by Business NH Magazine as intriguing women leaders in its' annual "Top Women-Led Businesses" issued published on October 1. In addition, Well Sense was named the top nonprofit in New Hampshire among a field of 25.

To bring attention to the economic contributions made by women-led businesses and nonprofits in New Hampshire, the magazine selected 82 businesses and profiled five intriguing women leaders from the list.

As Executive Director of Well Sense, Solsky leads the only nonprofit managed care organization in New Hampshire. Well Sense provides health insurance coverage and care coordination to New Hampshire's Medicaid population.

"I was honored to be featured by Business NH Magazine and appreciate that the magazine recognizes the success of women business leaders, our contributions to the community and to the local economy," said Solsky.

Solsky, who is also an attorney and previously served as Deputy Medicaid Director at the NH Department of Health and Human Services, has devoted most of her career to serving low-income, underserved populations in both Massachusetts and New Hampshire.
